Incorporated in 1957, Modern Cooperative Telephone Company (MCTC) provides telephone and Internet service to approximately 720 residential and business customers in five rural Iowa exchanges including Keswick, Kinross, Millersburg, South English, and Webster. MCTC is in the third year of a large FTTH construction project, replacing our aging copper plant. As a cooperative, MCTC prides itself in providing superior customer service to our members including delivering access to the best telecommunications technology available.

MCTC's key personnel provide a tremendous level of experience to the proposed South Keokuk County FTTP Project. Bios for Manager/CFO Brenda Bowman and Board President Jerry Husband are included in support of the proposed project. Their combined experience ensures the success of the proposed South Keokuk County FTTP Project. The Board of Directors plays an active role in MCTC's operations and includes a President, Vice President, and Secretary/Treasurer as well as 5 board members and 1 at-large member.

MCTC is a financially viable organization with the capability to meet all financial requirements outlined in this project. MCTC has a history of continued business success and meeting financial obligations within the communities they serve.
